

Kensington Pond Footbridge in Centennial Park – December 2020 Update

In planning for Tomorrow's Sydney, we are building a new pedestrian footbridge over Kensington Pond to connect the light rail along Alison Rd to Centennial Park

What we're doing in December within Centennial Park

We are working with Centennial Parklands to construct a new pedestrian footbridge across Kensington Pond to connect Centennial Park with the Royal Randwick Light Rail stop. This month our works involve the following:

- Installation of timber handrail + kerb.
- Landscaping and bush regeneration
- Site demobilisation

This work will require the use of a 5t excavator/13t Excavator and a tipper truck.

Location of the works

This stage of construction will take place in Centennial Park along the western bank of Kensington Ponds. We will also be working on the Sydney light rail boardwalk where the bridge is to tie in.

How will these works affect you?

Some of this work will be noisy. All work is to be held during standard hours and vehicles will be switched off when not in use. Any dust generating activities will be watered down.

Hours of Work

We will be working within the following standard hours:

Mon-Fri	7am-6pm
Sat	8am-1pm

Traffic Impacts

You may experience some disruption in Centennial Park, however impacts will be minimised wherever possible. Traffic Control will be in place at our truck holding bay on Grand Drive during operating hours. No vehicular detours will be made during this month.

There is no pedestrian access to the western bank of Kensington Pond. Signage has been placed around the compound to assist pedestrians.

Pedestrian and cycle traffic on the Sydney Light Rail Board Walk has been restored to normal.

Keeping you informed

You will receive advanced notification if any additional overnight works are required.
